Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If the period for reply specified above is less than thirty (30) days, a reply within the statutory minimum of thirty (30) days will be considered timely.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133).
- Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

DETAILED ACTION

1. The amendment filed January 15, 2003 has been received and entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Burkey et al.

As per claim 1, Burkey et al. teach a system for providing advice specifically tailored to an individual's profile comprising an interactive application running on a computer and the system includes a display operatively connected to the computer (see Figure 1). Burkey et al. also teach a first graphical user interface (GUI) displayed on the display of the computer and the first GUI comprises one or more descriptive icons (see Figures 21, 22, and 23). In addition, the system comprises a processor (110) wherein the processor is operative to generate advice (financial planning, healthcare, personal and professional development and etc.) (column 28, line 34- column 29, line 5) responding to an individual' profile. Burkey et al. do not mention explicitly a second GUI displayed on the display of the computer having descriptive icons representing one or more financial situations such as financial payment and etc. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the system, as taught by Burkey et al., to have a second set of GUI since it is well-known in the art that it is simple to duplicate the existing set of GUI for another one. Furthermore, it would have been obvious to one skilled artisan to add a means for generating financial payment advice in Burkey et al. system by adding additional application software.

As per claim 2, Burkey et al. teach a network having a plurality of file servers wherein the file servers comprise a plurality of databases (see Figures 10A and 24).

As per claims 3, 9, and 14, Burkey et al. do not explicitly mention a computer system that is operable to generate advice on negotiation strategies for interacting with the individual. However, Burkey et al. teaches a computer system that is operable to generate advice on financial planning, healthcare, personal and professional development and etc. (column 28, line 34- column 29, line 5) according to an individual's profile. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify the system, as taught by Burkey et al., to generate advice on negotiation strategies for interacting individual.

As per claim 4, Burkey et al. do not explicitly mention the GUI comprises at least one of predetermined questions and predetermined answers to the predetermined questions. However, Burkey et al. teach interfaces that allow user to drive the program and decide when certain actions should be performed (column 6, lines 60-64). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled artisan in the art to modify the GUI's, as taught by Burkey et al., to have predetermined questions and predetermined answers to the predetermined questions.

As per claim 5, it contains features addressed in claims 1 and 4, and therefore, is rejected under the same rationale.

As per claim 6, it contains features addressed in claim 1. and therefore, is rejected under the same rationale.

As per claims 7, 12, 15, Burkey et al. do not explicitly mention GUIs comprise means for specifying the type of the advice. However, Burkey et al. teach specific GUIs for specific category (see Figures 21, 22, and 23). It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to modify each GUI having a means for specifying the type of advice.

As per claim 8, it contains features addressed in the above paragraphs, and therefore, is rejected under the same rationale. An addition, the applicant recited the steps of retrieving strategy data in response to an individual's account information. Burkey et al. do not mention explicitly a step of retrieving strategy data in response to an individual's account information. However, Burkey et al. teach a web-based agent system that is capable to retrieve information from multiple databases according to an individual's profile. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled artisan to understand that the system, as taught by Burkey et al., is capable of retrieving information and/or strategy data in response to the selection of a descriptive icon.

As per claim 10, it contains features addressed in claim 4, and therefore, is rejected under the same rationale.

As per claims 11 and 16, the claims contain features addressed in the above claims, and therefore, are rejected under the same rationale. Further, Burkey et al.

Art Unit: 3628

teach interfaces that allow user to drive the program and decide when certain actions should be performed; therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled artisan in the art to modify the GUI's, as taught by Burkey et al., to have predetermined questions and predetermined answers to the predetermined questions and later to refine the answers and/or advice.

As per claim 13, it contains features addressed in previous claims, and therefore, is rejected under the same rationale. In addition, applicant recited a means for inputting into the system information specific to an individual. Burkey et al. teach a system having a user profile (1060). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art to realize that the system, as taught by Burkey et al., having a means for inputting into the system information specific to an individual.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed January 15, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not deemed to be persuasive.

Applicant indicated that the system, as taught by Burkey et al., does not provide negotiation advice to a customer service representative regarding an individual's economic situation. The Examiner would like to point out that the current claimed invention (recited in claims 1-16) does not recite "a negotiation advice to a customer service representative regarding an individual's economic situation". Applicant's arguments have been addressed in the above paragraphs.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
